

MATERIALS AND FINISHES

Finishes and colours are purely indicative and may vary from the versions shown due to printing technique.

The pigments that define lacquer colours are applied to all materials that make up the furniture: board, metal, plastic. This may result in a slight difference in colour due to the different substrate to which the paint is applied.

In addition, in some cases, a phenomenon may occur: chromatic metamerism, whereby two colours appear identical in a certain light, but are different when observed under a different light. This happens because light is composed of different wavelengths and objects reflect or absorb these wavelengths differently.
